

Newspapers

Newspapers contain a wealth of content which can be of immense benefit to literary researchers. Oxford subscribes to over 60 newspaper collections ranging in period from the 1600s to the present day.

In this task, you will try out some searches in a variety of different newspaper collections.

Newspapers

19th Century British Newspapers

- Connect to the Bodleian Libraries Databases A-Z platform (use the Finding Resources menu at <https://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/>, or use the Databases link on the SOLO page)
- Choose Newspapers from the Subjects menu and then click on Go to see the list of titles/collections available on Databases A-Z
- Connect to British Library Newspapers, Parts I-IV (1732-1950) (by clicking on the title in the results list)
- Choose the Advanced Search option
- Search for early reviews of Jane Eyre by putting jane eyre in one search box and curren bell in another search box; make sure both are set to search the Entire Document (tx) (rather than Keyword (ke)); you can avoid results from advertisements by selecting the other categories of material in the by publication section and excluding Advertising (to select more than one publication section, hold down the shift key while you click on each section you want to select):
- Click on Search

How many newspaper reviews of Jane Eyre can you find, published in 1847? Note that you can put the search results in Publication Date Ascending order, using the Sort by dropdown menu (top right)

Find the review in The Literary Examiner for 27 November 1847, and open the full text to see if the review was favourable.

Times Digital Archive 1785-2012
